Translation of corporate publications

Building a company's image is a long process, and the publications related to it contribute to the company's success. Corporate publications typically have many phases, be they personnel magazines or interim financial reports. The division of tasks between teams is key to ensuring a functioning whole.

The whole world is open

Multilingual corporate publications reach the company's stakeholders all over the world. The target audience receives the company's strategically important information in accordance with the original message. This is ensured by the translator's thorough knowledge of the client's field of business.

Polished to perfection

When creating materials that contribute to a company's image, changes in the texts cannot be avoided. Polishing the expressions in the publications together with the client is part of the translation process for this type of text. Updating texts that can change within a tight schedule requires good organisational skills and effective version management.

Long-term cooperation

Working together leads to a good partnership, in which all the stages of the process are carefully finalised and everything works well. Nouveau brings together a professional translation team that meets your needs, to produce stylistically and terminologically coherent text that is journalistically fluent. Our delivery reliability is first-rate, even with multilingual projects.
